and German basketball player Mr Jan Niklas Wimberg, is the owner of Kangaroos Basketball GmbH, for which the academy is an important part of its development. The professional team and up-and-coming basketball talent will have access to a top-class training setup at the facility. As both sets of players mainly train during the day, there will be no conflict with the club's training schedule.

The long-standing club is an integral part of local social and community life. It filed for insolvency in February. The economic fundamentals and the financial circumstances of the club were analysed under the direction of the insolvency administrator as part of the insolvency proceedings. The sale of the property belonging to the club, its financial stabilisation through an investor and the cooperation with TSV Haunstetten are the main elements of the restructuring concept.

"Stable economic future created"

"With the insolvency plan, we have succeeded in financially restructuring the club while creating the basis for its stable economic future. The property will still be available for training and match play. The solution also represents the best possible outcome for the creditors," explained Mr Stemshorn. well as the sale of the property in Augsburg.

The insolvency plan is to be voted on by the creditors in July. If it is approved by a majority, it can then be confirmed by the Local Court of Augsburg (insolvency court). After that, it will be possible to close the proceedings, enabling a fresh start for the club in summer 2025.

“We are pleased that we can help to preserve a long-standing club and to strengthen sporting and community life in our region for the long term. Sport brings people together,” said Mr Daniel Siegmund.

The club’s leadership team under Mr Heinz Krötz is also relieved: “We are grateful that we will soon be able to put this difficult phase behind us and are now better equipped to move forward. The support from the insolvency administrator was crucial to this successful outcome. We must now await the creditors’ approval of the insolvency plan in the summer. We are looking forward to what lies ahead and to the cooperation with the basketball club and Siegmund.” Post SV Augsburg also updated its delegates on this matter at an information event held yesterday.

If the creditors approve the insolvency plan and the court confirms the plan, it will be possible to conclude the proceedings. The club will again hold full operational responsibility after the proceedings have been terminated, probably in the summer. All sports activities have been running as usual since the application was filed.
